Ten Cents

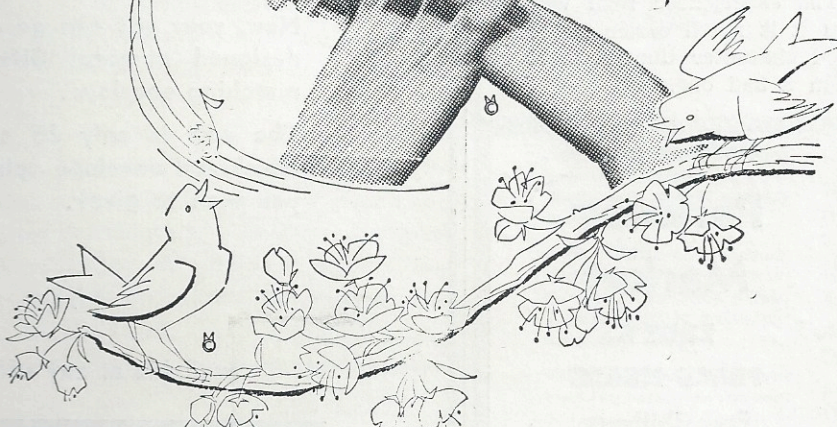

*You will hear my silver laughter
If you listen in the glen,
For I am stealing softly
Through the countryside again . . .*

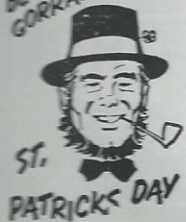

*You will recognize my perfume
In the lilac-scented air,
And by this, on chilly evenings,
I shall prove that I am there . . .*

*You will hear my voice a-tinkling
In the raindrops on the brook,
And my charms will be unfolding
Like a painted story book . . .*

*You will see my picture plainly
In the clover's gentle art;
But best of all, you'll know me
When I whisper in your heart!*

ODDS AND ENDS

The Linotype operator murdered the editorial last month by leaving out a paragraph relating to the INS and OUTS in political office.

To-day it seems to be the general practice in the newspaper business, and is excusable although it appears to the reader that the writer is in a muddle.

Slipshod methods are common to-day in other lines of endeavor. Anything is good enough if it manages to squeeze through the inspector or purchaser, as long as time is saved.

Glad to see the President has returned to his golf and fishing; and although he holds the respect (as Mr. America) to all nations of the world he will be foolish to run for another term of office.

Too many terms killed Roosevelt, a term and a half made Truman look pretty wan, and his defeat in '52 was a personal victory. One term is sufficient for anyones health.

THE CITY

When the Mayor was informed of the passage by the State Senate empowering a committee to investigate any city in the state he stated. "We have nothing to hide".

That is evidently true; — the Mayor has been very brazen in his hold up methods of the taxpayer; —Nuisance taxes, increase in Real Estate Taxes via increased assessed valuations and a big boost in the rate.

All this to cover an increase in his staff and increase in salaries.

A NEW BROOM SWEEPS CLEAN

When Adams was appointed Police Commissioner he by the way concentrated on juvenile delinquency, by upsetting an organized system already working in conjunction with youth patrolmen and P.A.L. in the different Police Precincts. Coordinating Councils as such were dead and Youth Councils under closer police control were organized, with new assignments and duties that never materialized. All that happened was the taking away of most of the initiative from the Coordinating Council.

Adam's is gone — "Long live the Police Commissioner."

The new head is concentrating on members of the department, making life miserable for the individual. Demotion is his by word. Moving members of the department from posts of many years standing to outposts among strangers is not in keeping with the aim of having better relations between police and laymen.

A precinct is like a small town and will receive more protection from a more or less permanent staff who knows who's who than it will from transients.

The commissioners campaign against traffic violators is good, if the members of his staff don't get over zealous and hand out tickets willy nilly like a member of the local precinct now retired who made a boast about how many tickets he handed out each day.

Remember — You are guilty until you can prove your innocence — and you can't do that in a traffic violation.

SCHOOL DAYS

BY TEACHER

HOME STUDY

Home study is a form of homework. The teacher doesn't always specify the exact page in a text or the notes for home study, but she nevertheless expects the student to follow through at home. Home study is necessary for junior and senior high school students. Unless the teacher gives a written assignment students often tell their parents they have no homework. This is particularly true of the junior high school student. He has been used to getting in his elementary school days, a certain number of spelling words to write a definite number of times and three or four examples to solve for homework. Unless he has a definite written assignment he feels nothing is expected of him in the way of homework.

The junior high school pupil needs to learn how to study at home without the direction from the teacher. He is supplied with text books, which are usually used in class or at least referred to in some manner. For example, a topic in social studies may be discussed in class. That topic will be found somewhere in the social studies text book. The teacher usually indicates where.

During his homework period in the evening the student should read over in his text book the topic that was discussed in class that day. By doing this he refreshes his memory as to subject matter and without doubt learns something which he may have missed during the lesson. It is not at all unusual to miss a point or two during class discussion or recitation. Rereading the text at home clinches the lesson and prepares the pupil for new subject matter to be taught the following day.

Only the expectant student, who is a lover of books and knowledge will do the follow up studying of his own volition. Often he's the student who needs it the least. Those who need it the most will find a score of reasons for not looking at their books in the evening. Too often it's a television program or an evening date that keeps the pupil from his books.

Studying text books at home has several advantages. It is bound to help the student know his subject matter better and increases his ratings. It helps him become better acquainted with books. The pupil who learns how to use his text books at home becomes more resourceful in seeking knowledge. Many other advantages could be listed.

Parents should examine text books brought home by their children. To train the pupil in the use of these books at home it would be well for the parent to question the child as to the topics studied in class. The child should then be asked by the parent to point out the topic in the text before attempting to study. To add variety the parent might ask the child to read the text aloud, then discuss the topic with him. This would give the youngster a chance to show off what he knows and give him a little added pride in his scholastic achievement.

All the exhortation in the world by teachers concerning homework is of little avail unless parents cooperate in the matter. It is the obligation of a parent to require the child to sit down in the evening with his books. At least a half hour's study should be demanded before the child is allowed any sort of diversion or entertainment.

THE LETTER BOX

Dear Editor:

As you know, the 1956 Queens Mothers' March on Polio was the most successful drive ever conducted for the March of Dimes in this Borough.

The total collected during the two-hour campaign will be more than $275,000.

As always, the Mothers' March on Polio was a personal appeal, conducted by more than 25,000 residents of Queens, who contacted their neighbors for contributions. These workers were tireless in their efforts and without their enthusiasm and support, the Queens Mothers' March on Polio could not have been the tremendous success it was, surpassing for the third consecutive year all other Boroughs in Greater New York.

I am taking the liberty of using the columns of your newspaper to express my personal thanks to these women and men. I know that they will be gratified to know that their work will forward the work of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and will hasten the day when the scourge of polio will be no more.

My thanks again to them for their splendid work.

Very truly yours,

(Mrs.) Thomas Grodin

Queens Chairman,

Mothers' March on Polio.

150 - ST. GREGORY TEENAGERS TOUR WEST PT. Moderator imparts Blessing

On Wednesday, February 22nd, George Washington's Birthday, one hundred and fifty teen-agers boarded four busses, engaged for a scenic drive to West Point.

The weather was most favorable bright, sunny, but cold. The warm enthusiasm of the 150 members of St. Gregory's active Confraternity Club however made up for any "nip in the air".

Before departure, Father James Reynolds, the Moderator of the teen-age club, gave instructions as to behavior and conduct. He then imparted his priestly blessing to the boys and girls in each bus for a safe and happy journey. Fr. Reynolds accompanied the large group, and was ably assisted by twelve of his Senior Confraternity Committee.

Arrangements had been made for several Cadets to meet the group on arrival. Everyone was delighted to see them resplendent in their blue military uniform. The cadets escorted the group around the gorgeous grounds of the Military Academy, and were most friendly in answering frequent questions. They were at their finest, however, when posing for pictures as they graciously consented to each request.

After obtaining refreshments at the Main Post Exchange, and enjoying the panoramic view of the Hudson River from the Military Academy grounds the group visited the Catholic Chapel to pay a prayerful visit to Him, who is the inspiration and model of every soldier.

At three in the afternoon, the entire group took reluctant leave of the Academy and journeyed further up the scenic Hudson along the adventuresome Storm King Highway to a famous restaurant, "The Rhoda Arms", on Highway 9W outside of Newburg, New York. There the group was joined by an additional hundred teen-agers from St. Pascal Baylon parish in Hollis, N. Y., under the supervision of Rev. Arthur A. Sullivan. All enjoyed cokes and hamburgers, but more especially the spacious dance floor.

After two hours of continuous dancing, both groups left in their respective busses to begin the long trek homeward. Fond memories of the club's first major outing will linger in the minds of each member, who had the pleasure of joining St. Gregory's outing to West Point.

The following evening, February 23rd, Father Reynolds interviewed the various members of the Confraternity Club on a tape recorder and he plans to play the interesting recording at a future date. Father will also hold a Photographic Contest on the best, most original, and the most humorous pictures that the members took at West Point on that happy Washington's Birthday.

TEMPLE SHOLOM NEWS

The festival of Purim or the Feast of Lots was observed by Jews beginning at sunset, Saturday February 25. Purim is a scriptural festival, based on the Book of Esther. The Book relates how the Jews were delivered by Esther, a Jewess, who was the Queen of Persia and her kinsman, Mordecai, from destruction at the hands of Haman who was an anti-Jewish tyrannical vizier. The holiday also celebrates similar events that occurred throughout Jewish History. The word, Purim, means "Lots" and refers to the manner in which Haman set the date for his expected massacre of the Jewish people, which turned out to be the date of deliverance and therefore, Purim.

Purim is one of the merriest of Jewish holidays. The Magillah or Scroll of Esther is read during Purim services and prayers are offered in thanksgiving for the love of freedom implanted by God in the soul of man. Parties, plays, pageants, masquerades and festive meals give the touch of gaiety to the religious school and home observance of the joyful day. Gift exchanges and donations to charity are also part of the holiday celebration.

The Congregation and the members of Temple Sholom are supporting the Milmo Bill which proposes to remove all zoning restrictions from houses of worship and religious institutions.
